

Helping young people to become published authors!

Congratulations to Angeliz J. Isaac

Got to Write is a new arm from JDN that is dedicated to helping teenagers write and publish their stories and writings. JDN would like to inspire young people to become writers. In this case, we helped Angeliz Isaac to publish her first book titled Losing You Without Knowing You. This is the poignant and heart-wrenching real-life story of a young girl who was adopted, and from the moment she was born, she felt the weight of abandonment and grew up with a deep sense of anger and longing towards the woman who brought her into this world. However, fate had a cruel twist in store for her. Now, as a young woman, she shares her story with others, particularly youth and young people facing their struggles and challenges. She uses her experiences to inspire and encourage them to find strength in their faith and to love God even amid their difficulties, traumas, or damaged emotions. She emphasizes that she is God's baby girl, a testament to His saving grace and the transformative power of love. Her story serves as a reminder that despite adversity and loss, there is always hope and the possibility of healing. It is a testament to the resilience of the human spirit and the power of love to overcome even the most difficult circumstances. Through her journey, she has found purpose in sharing her story, offering a message of hope and redemption to those who may feel lost or abandoned. In the end, this is a story of resilience, forgiveness, and the enduring power of love. Visit www.jdnpublications.com.
